

Will Co. Board Knocks Out New Bond Issue

The proposed new bond issue for Will County roads under the gas tax is dead, the board of supervisors having voted the matter down at their session Wednesday afternoon. The proposed issue was for about two million dollars and was to have built 78 miles of road in the county. The program had been approved by both the county and state and at the last minute the whole proposition was knocked out. On the measure killed, Mokena was to have had four miles of road. A portion from the Lincoln highway on the highway in the back of the Bruder farm to the Wolf road in Mokena was to have been graveled. From the Wolf road on the front street to Route 51 to the east of Mokena was to have been a black top road. This puts the road in question in the ash can for the time being. Considerable sentiment against the bond issue was making itself manifest in many parts of the county.

TO RE-ORGANIZE S. W. CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

A special meeting called for the purpose of re-organizing the Southwest Chamber of Commerce was held in the Orland High School Auditorium on Sept. 17. In spite of a misunderstanding in regard to the date of the meeting, about 40 were present when President Edw. Cowan called the meeting to order. Inasmuch as no meeting of the organization had been in over a year, there were no reports or minutes to read by secretary John Klein. President Ed. Cowan in an introductory talk, stated that in view of the fact that the Southwest Highway from Chicago to Orland Park, was largely thru the efforts of the organization, an accomplished project, it had therefore, in the minds of a number of the original members, ceased to be a necessary body. However, President Cowan, pointed out that the need for organization was as great now as in the past. Certain gaps in the Highway were not as yet completed and needed organized support to secure this result. Dr. W. A. Schussler, former president of the Chamber of Commerce spoke at length, amplifying Mr. Cowan's remarks and stressed the need for a permanent organization. He pointed out that only by persistent organized effort that the original plan of creating a super-highway extending from Chicago to St. Louis could be made a reality. The present highway, with the exception of a few gaps, is virtually completed to Orland Park. The present object of the Chamber of Commerce will be (continued on back page)

Auto Banged When It Hits Bull

An auto is known to have a habit of picking up nails, glass and other odds and ends with its tires and by so doing cause the owner grief, but it has remained for the auto of Albert Strassenburg, Mokena to be in a class by itself by picking up a bull. According to the story Mr. Strassenburg was driving on the Tinley and Mokena road recently when a bull belonging to a neighbor farmer suddenly disputed the right of way and before Mr. Strassenburg could stop, the auto hit Mr. Bull. The resultant damage was all done to the car and amounted to about $100.

Orland P. T. A. Activities Begin

The first fall meeting of the Orland Park P. T. A. was called to order Thursday evening, Sept. 11th with the new officers in their respective chairs, Mrs. Hilda Cox as president, Mrs. Mollie Reich as secretary and Mrs. Fred Uthe as treasurer.

The business of the meeting was of routine type only, receiving reports of committees, etc. The only new business to be taken up was the proposition of continuing the plan of offering a picture as a prize to the room having the largest representation of parents at the monthly meetings. It was agreed that as their plan had been successful in previous years it should be continued and a committee was appointed to select a picture.

At the last meeting before the summer vacation a committee was appointed to plan for the sidewalk which the Association had intended to present to the school. In view of the fact that there was not enough money available in this fund to pay for the cost of the sidewalk, Mrs. Adele Cooper announced that the school directors would be able to complete the job out of the district funds.

However, as no definite report was presented by the committee, the matter was held over for future action for concurrence of the school board.

Following the meeting refreshments consisting of lemonade, cake, candy, etc., were served.

The next meeting of the welfare clinic will be held Oct. 8th under the direction of Mrs. Lawrence Uthe chairman.

C. A. Lively Finds Stolen Car

C. A. Lively of Mokena discovered a new Straight 8 Nash automobile 1930 model without license plates standing alongside of the highway back of the Bruder farm as he was driving on this road Sept. 4. He reported the matter to the office of the sheriff in Joliet who in turn had Cooper & Hostert take the car to their garage. The owner of the car, a garage owner in Cincinnati, was traced thru the motor number which had been sent to the Nash factory. He came to Mokena Tuesday evening of this week and got the car. He said his garage had been held up and robbed of $65. The bandits stole the Nash to make their get away. The reason the car was abandoned here is thought to have been due to motor trouble and fear that the car might be recognized if taken to a garage for repairs. The holdup occurred about a month ago. The car was insured against theft.

Orland Fire Chief Commended by Mayor

Fire Chief John Helenhouse of Orland Park has received the following complimentary letter from Mayor Ralph Jennings anent the Labor Day parade:

Dear Mr. Helenhouse: The Board desires to take this opportunity to congratulate you and the members of the fire department on the splendid parade and picnic which was put on Labor day. It was a big thing done in a big way and eclipses anything of the kind ever done before in the interest of the fire department and the Village.

It was gratifying to learn that the "antique" entered by the village was considered of sufficient interest to warrant second prize and the Board desires to acknowledge receipt of the $15 second prize money. However, in view of the spirit of cooperation and the interest that is now being shown by the fire department as a whole, we have instructed that the clerk issue voucher in favor of the department in the amount of $15 reimbursing you for this expense with the thought that it may be found useful in the purchase of additional equipment or incidentals as may be needed at this time.

Yours truly,
BOARD OF TRUSTEES
By R. W. Jennings, President.

4-H Club Holds First Annual Show

Cook County closed its first year of Club Work at Santa Fe Park, Tiedtville, by holding its first 4-H Club Show, September 12th and 13. A purse of $700 was up for almost five hundred exhibits.

Club work is carried on by the Cook County Farm Bureau co-operating with the U. S. Department of Agriculture and the State University. O. G. Barrett, Farm Adviser, of Arlington Heights, and M. E. Tascher, Ass't Adviser, of Blue Island, are in charge.

One hundred twenty-five boys and girls were enrolled in nine clubs located at Tinley Park, Orland, Chicago Heights, Worth, LaGrange, Elk Grove, Arlington Heights and Elgin. The boys from Tinley Park and Orland figured highly in the prize winning at the county show. Owen Maue of Mokena, won $35 or first on his Holstein heifer, Hebert Keuch of Tinley Park, second and Ray Meier of Orland, third and fourth.

Emil Bormet and Carl A. Bormet won first and second on their Brown Swiss heifers and Frederick Henke, third on his Milking Shorthorn heifer.

In the Swine Class of fat Barrows, Henry Henke, Jr., won first and second and Roy Newton first.

Harwood Stellwagen won two fourth and a fifth prize on his poultry.

Willard Pitts took second and fourth on his corn samples.

These boys, besides winning very good cash prizes, have developed an interest in their duties on the farm and have an interest in good livestock or crops rather than just so much work. They have learned some good pointers on feeding and management thru their experience and meetings.

The club for next year will soon start organization. The boys interested in dairy calf work should get their calves this fall. Only purebred heifer calves dropped after August 1st, 1930 will be eligible for 1931 Club Work in the calf division. A heifer class of yearlings will be had for purebred heifers dropped after August 1st, 1929 and before August 1st, 1930.

Boys and girls get in the club by inquiring of any of the members who were in this year or writing the Farm Bureau office at Blue Island.

Begin S. W. Highway Grading

Active grading work has begun on the connecting link of the Southwest highway from the Wolf road thru the Emil Krapp farm north of Mokena to the Will county line to the northwest where it connects with the Maple road. A fleet of caterpillar tractors, scrapers and trucks are engaged in building the mile of roadbed. A number of fills from 7 to 8 feet had to be made so paving work will not be done this year as the fills must first settle before any paving can be laid on them. Considerable tiling had to be done in the low land near the Wolf road.

The new road connects with Wolf road at a point west of the Krapp farm house and barn yard.

FIREBUGS BURN 4th SCHOOL

The communists or maniacs who have been setting fire to public school buildings in Will county, set fire to the Ridgewood school on the outskirts of Joliet Saturday night. The structure contained eight rooms and was built in 1895 at a cost of $48,000. The building was of stone with a wooden interior which was completely burned out.

Another theory for these school fires advanced is that some contractors may be hiring firebugs to burn down these school buildings to provide work for idle carpenters as the school buildings must be rebuilt as soon as possible.

The country school house which was burned to the ground in Homer township a week ago, has been replaced by a portable garage for the present and school is going on just the same.

40 New Families Promised for Tinley

Sometime ago the lower courts awarded $1750 damages to Wm. Knipple of Frankfort against the E. J. & E. railroad as a result of an accident in 1927 in which Mr. Knipple's son was killed. The J took the case before the Appellate court, which in a ruling handed down Monday upheld the lower courts decision. The J may appeal the case to the Supreme Court. The railroad is represented by Donovan, Bray & Gray of Joliet and Knapp & Campbell of Chicago. Mr. Knipple is being represented by Attorney A. H. Krusemark of Frankfort.

Flowers from the garden of Mrs. Chas. Nielsen, Mrs. Wm. Funk, Mrs. George Hartman and Mrs. R. J. Hug were sent to Blue Island Flower Show last Saturday. These garden club members were pleased to receive ribbon awards.

Miss Shirley Anderson received a blue ribbon on her poster. This was a very original idea by using buttons and colored beads.

Mrs. Florence Anderson had a most artistic "ray" as an entry. Mrs. Henry Luff had a black vase of lovely petunias as her entry.

Mrs. Wm. Funk and Mrs. R. J. Hug served as judges and enjoyed the day with Blue Island Garden club very much.

Congratulations to Blue Island Garden Club from the Tinley Park Garden club for your lovely show.

On Monday evening a bud on Mrs. Hug's Night Blooming Cereus burst into bloom. The plant was taken to the Village Hall so that all the folks could see it.

Visitors came from Forest Ridge, Blue Island and Mokena, besides ever so many from Tinley Park.

Mrs. Fred Henke (the lady who gave Mrs. Hug the plant) was at the hall too, and she was given the name of "Grandmother" of the plant.

Mr. Fred Henke brought this variety of plant from Janesville, Wis., about forty years ago. It is a wonderful sight to watch this bud, as it takes about one hour to slowly open. Then it is as pure and white and looks like a lily and it sends forth a very pleasing fragrance. Another name is "The King of the Night". The bud remains open and then toward morning slowly closes up again taking almost as long as it does to open.

The plant blooms only once a year and always in the same month.

Tuesday evening two buds opened at the same time. One more bud opened Wednesday.

Flowers from the gardens of Mrs. Henry Klepper, Mrs. Jennie Klepper and Mrs. Wm. Funk were sent to the Guild. These were taken thru the kindness of Miss Alice Hartman and Mr. Stanley Mager.

Wolf Road Given O. K. To Start Work Soon

At last it begins to look as tho Wolf road was coming into its own. Monday morning the official O. K. of the state highway department at Springfield was received by Glenn Fletcher, Will County Engineer at Joliet. This means the contract of the Powers-Thompson Construction Company of Joliet has been approved and it is now up to the contractors to begin work. Mr. Fletcher states that grading work may start next week and that the aim is to finish the paving of Wolf road from the county line north of Mokena to the Hickory creek bridge south of Mokena by Thanksgiving, depending of course on weather conditions.

Work on the Hickory creek bridge is coming along nicely. All the abutments have been poured, the last one being the south wall which was poured Monday morning.

Water from the old gravel pit had seeped thru the gravel into the openings for the abutments and by constant pumping the old pit has been pumped dry. A few pails of small fish including black bass were found in the pit bottom and were dumped into Hickory creek. The new bridge north of Mokena has been fully completed.

Lesson for September 21

JONAH: THE NARROW NATIONALIST REBUKED

LESSON TEXT—Jonah 3:1-5, 10; 4:1-11.

GOLDEN TEXT—And Peter opened his mouth and said, "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is acceptable to him."

PRIMARY TOPIC—God's Love for All the World.

JUNIOR TOPIC—God's Love for all the World.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Is True Patriotism?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Patriotism and World Brotherhood.

In teaching this lesson it will be necessary to sweep into view the entire Book of Jonah.

I. Jonah's Call and Commission (Ch. 1:1, 2).

Jonah, a Jew, was called to go and preach repentance to a Gentile city. (Gen. 12:1, 2). The story of Jonah graphically portrays the history of Israel as a nation. God separated Israel to be the channel through which his mercy and salvation are to be carried to all nations. They, like Jonah, have been recalcitrant to duty. Because of this, God has caused them to be swallowed up by the nations which will one day spew them out upon dry ground—Palestine. After severe chastisement, they will discharge their obligation, and the nations through their ministry will repent and turn to God.

II. Jonah's Flight From Duty (1:3).

He turned his back upon God and attempted to flee from his presence. In the same way Israel has become an apostate people.

III. Jonah's Correction (1:4-2:10).

1. Overtaken by a storm (v. 4).

Trouble soon came upon the disobedient servant of God. So with the Jews, misfortune after misfortune have overtaken them because they turned from God. They are now tossed about by the surging of the nations.

2. Cast overboard (v. 15).

In their perplexity the sailors cast lots, and the lot fell upon Jonah. According to his own direction they cast him overboard. God had prepared a great fish which swallowed him.

3. Jonah's deliverance (Ch. 2).

Jonah in his affliction turned to God, and prayed (James 5:13). God miraculously preserved him while in the belly of the fish, and he has miraculously preserved Israel in the heart of the nations. The fish could not digest Jonah, neither can the nations digest Israel. Jonah repented while in the fish. So Israel will repent as they go into the great tribulation. God made the fish to vomit out Jonah. So he will at the proper time cause the nations to cast out Israel.

IV. Jonah's Commission Renewed (Ch. 3).

His experience made him willing to do God's bidding.

1. His field (v. 3).

He was to go to Nineveh, a large city, the people of which were cruel. Israel's field is the Gentile nations.

2. His message (v. 4).

He was instructed to "preach the preaching" commanded by God. Forty days were given to the people in which to repent. God's supreme desire is that all should repent (II Peter 3:9). This message represents the heart of God in his dealing with sinners.

3. Repentance of the Ninevites (vv. 5-8).

(1) They believed God (v. 5).

They believed that God was speaking to them through Jonah about their sins, and was announcing impending judgment.

(2) They proclaimed a fast (vv. 5-8).

The king and people joined sincerely in this movement. They put on sackcloth, the sign of penitence.

(3) They reasoned that God would repent (v. 9).

The sending to them of a prophet encouraged them to believe that God would show mercy if they repented.

V. Jonah's Behavior (Jonah 4:1-11).

1. He repines at God's action (vv. 1-3).

He now makes known the real reason for his flight from duty. He knew that the gracious God would spare the people who repented. The treatment of the Israelites at the hand of the Ninevites was such that Jonah did not want God to forgive them. We have here a case of a preacher of repentance mortified when the people repent and are pardoned.

2. God reproves Jonah (vv. 4-11).

By means of the gourd God showed him his error. This closing scene affords a striking example of the patience and pity of God in contrast with the hard-heartedness of man.

Our Religion

Our religion is, indeed, a thing between God and our own soul; but it is also a thing between us and society, and to attempt to isolate and secrete it is to deprive it of a thousand influences and excitements essential to its perfection.—William L. Watkinson.

The KITCHEN CABINET

(©, 1930, Western Newspaper Union.)

The world is all dark or the world is all bright
Just as we choose to make it:
Our burden is heavy, our burden is light.

Just as we happen to take it:
And people who grumble and people who groan
At the world and at every proposal

Would grumble and groan if the world were their own
And the sun, moon and stars at disposal.

TO ADD TO THE FRUIT CLOSET

As sugar is one of the cheapest of foods in common use, its food value high, most housewives are appreciating the chance to preserve and jelly as much of the delightful fall fruits as possible. Try some of these and see what an addition they will make to your preserve closet:

Tomato-Raisin Conserve.—Take two quarts of fresh ripe tomatoes, two lemons cut fine, four sour apples

cored and cubed, six sticks of cinnamon, one tablespoonful of whole cloves, two pieces of ginger root, one small piece of mace. Tie the spices in a bag. Cook all these ingredients together until a thick mass is made, then add two pounds of sugar and boil 15 minutes, or until a jelly stage is reached, which is when the mixture drops off in sheets from the side of the spoon. Add one cupful of nut meats just before removing from the fire, if liked.

Carrot Marmalade.—Grate 12 medium-sized tender carrots, add four cupfuls of sugar, three lemons, juice and peel; one teaspoonful each of ground cloves, cinnamon and allspice, tied in a small cloth. Before adding the spice let the mixture stand one hour, then cook slowly one hour, turn into sterilized glasses and seal.

Pear and Apple Conserve.—Take one pint of diced pears, one pint of diced apple, one lemon juice and grated rind, one cupful of seedless raisins, one-half cupful of walnut meats, three and one-half cupfuls of sugar.

Steam the raisins for 30 minutes, add them to the other ingredients and cook until thick and clear. Turn into glasses and cover with paraffin. Nuts may be omitted and a small amount of preserved ginger may be added.

Pickled Pears.—Peel four quarts of pears. Boil two pounds of sugar with two cupfuls of vinegar, one-half ounce of stick cinnamon and one-fourth ounce of cloves for 20 minutes. Place a few of the whole pears in the sirup and cook until tender, then place in the cans. Fill each jar to overflowing with the hot sirup, then seal.

DAINTY DISHES.

Some time when entertaining one's friends at a dinner, try this method of serving sweet potato:

Orange Sweet Potato.

—Cook the sweet potato in their skins, peel, mash and season with butter, salt and white pepper. Prepare the halves of oranges that have been squeezed of their juice by removing all the white inner lining of the skins. Fill them with the seasoned potato and about twenty minutes before serving time place them in the oven to become hot; a small piece of marshmallow may be placed on top to brown or a sprig of parsley used on top for a garnish when serving.

Coconut Drops.—Grate a fresh coconut and add to it half its weight in sugar, stir until well mixed, then add one beaten egg white and drop on buttered tin and bake in a slow oven until brown.

Oyster Soup.—Add four tablespoonfuls of quick cooking tapioca to a quart of rich milk, two teaspoonfuls of salt, and cook until the tapioca is clear, stirring often and cooking in a double boiler. Add one cupful of oysters and the oyster liquor, a dash of cayenne and paprika and four tablespoonfuls of butter. Serve when the oysters are curled.

Sour Cream Pie.—Mix the yolks of two eggs well beaten, one cupful of sour cream, one-half cupful of sugar, one tablespoonful of flour, one cupful of raisins and one teaspoonful of cinnamon. Cook together until thick, then pour into a baked pastry shell. Whip the whites of the eggs until stiff, add four tablespoonfuls of sugar and spread over the top of the pie and brown slightly in a slow oven.

Ozark Soup.—

Is the "Lost Dauphin" Mystery Solved?

LOUIS XVII

SUPPOSED TOMB OF LOUIS XVII IN PARIS

THE DAUPHIN

BURIAL OF CAPE'S SON, JUNE, 1794

"THE SHADOW KING"

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ONE of the most absorbing mysteries of all time, a mystery which historians for years have vainly tried to clear up, is that in which the central figure was a little boy, the son of Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette of France, a prince of royal blood, who, although known in history as Louis XVII, never reigned and who is supposed to have died at the age of ten. He is perhaps better known as "The Lost Dauphin" than as Louis XVII and the story of the beginning of the mystery is familiar to most of us. Briefly, it is this:

After the heads of the French monarch and his queen rolled down the guillotine, their son, the eight-year-old Dauphin, was held as a prisoner in the tower of the Temple in Paris by the revolutionary government. The boy was kept in close confinement and even his sister, Marie Therese, also a prisoner, was never permitted to see him. The French royalists, most of whom had fled from that country as the red tide of the revolution mounted higher, had proclaimed the Dauphin "King Louis XVII" but in June, 17, 1795, the revolutionary authorities announced that after a short illness, "Capet's son" had died.

This version of the Dauphin's fate was generally accepted, not only during the revolution and the reign of Napoleon, but even after the Bourbons had been restored to the throne for the period of their brief rule. It is true that there were constantly recurring whispers in France and throughout Europe that the Dauphin had not died in the Temple, but that he had been secretly removed by royalist conspirators and was still living. Along with these rumors came the first of the crop of "pretenders" who were to bob up regularly, each to claim, or have it claimed for him, that he was "The Lost Dauphin." One of the most famous of all these pretenders was the Prussian clockmaker, Karl Wilhelm Naundorff, who came forward with his claims in 1833.

Recently there has appeared a new book on the Lost Dauphin mystery which affords no end of interesting speculation as to the answer to this historic puzzle. It is "The Shadow King" by Hans Roger Madol, first published in Leipzig, Germany, in 1928 and recently published in this country by the Houghton, Mifflin company. It is based upon original documents, many of which have hitherto been unknown to historians. "The Shadow King" is King Louis XVII and Herr Madol believes, and sets forth in this book evidence to prove, that he was Karl Wilhelm Naundorff, regarded during his lifetime only as one of the numerous pretenders to that title.

The first part of his book is devoted to proving that the real Dauphin was secretly smuggled away from the Temple and another child, a deaf mute, put there in his place. The evidence in support of the belief that the boy who died there was not the Dauphin is based upon these facts: that the Dauphin was declared to have died of scrofula, although there is nothing to indicate that he had it before; that, beginning in December, 1794, he suddenly stopped speaking and that a committee from the National Assembly which visited his cell could not get a word from him, whereas before that time the little prince had talked volubly; that about the same time his warden, Jean Laurent, suddenly resigned his post and left Paris and that years later when the grave in which the Dauphin was officially reported to have been buried was opened the skeleton of a fifteen-year-old boy and not of a ten-year-old boy was found.

Further evidence in support of the belief that the Dauphin was abducted is based upon the secret history of the French revolution that has come to light in comparatively recent years. This includes the fact that innumerable intrigues were under way to release the royal prisoner, mainly on the part of Royalists, both those who had fled from France and those who were able to remain. Then, too, it has been shown that those two great rascals among the revolutionists, Fauche and Barras, regarded the boy as a valuable asset to have in their possession in case the revolution failed and they were not above double-crossing the members of their party to serve their own ends. So the probability of the Dauphin's escape seems convincing enough.

As for establishing Naundorff's identity as the Dauphin, the second part of "The Shadow King," which is devoted to that task, is pretty well summed up in the following words from the first chapter of the book:

"Seldom is the picture of a historical character found in such a complicated frame as that of the clockmaker, Karl Wilhelm Naundorff, who came from Prussia to France in the thirties of the last century and declared that he was the son of Louis XVI, the Dauphin who was supposed to have died in the Temple as a boy of ten, and who had won the pity of all who had read of the ill-treatment suffered by the child at the hands of the shoemaker, Simon. The astonishing thing is that this same Naundorff, a mere artisan and to all appearances of common origin, hardly able to speak French at the beginning of his stay in Paris, a stranger to the country for at least twenty years, and by no means a young man, was yet able to win the confidence of a mass of people, and of people of consequence. The members of Louis XVI's court, his minister of justice and private secretary, the Dauphin's nurse (who was still alive), all identified him. Jules Favre, the famous barrister and statesman, undertook to defend his case and remained his friend throughout the manifold vicissitudes of his adventurous life, which brought him remarkable successes as well as bitter failures. Recognized in England and Holland, the Pretender died at the very moment when a convention with the Dutch government had relieved him of his main anxiety about the fate of his wife and children. His sons and grandsons have never given up the fight for recognition. As officers in the Dutch army they bear today, by right of patent, the name of Bourbon.

"The vigorous attempts which were made at all times to eliminate the disturbing existence of this Pretender are illustrated by the unsuccessful attempt which was made on his life, by his expulsion from France in 1836, and by the persecutions of those who could find no further legal weapon against him, which lasted right up to his death. However much right-minded people in France protested against this unconstitutional treatment (as for instance, Cremieux, the minister of justice, at the time of his expulsion) they were unable to do anything for the Pretender. The 202 documents with which he intended to defend his claims, and which were confiscated on this occasion, were never returned to him."

Elsewhere in his book, Herr Madol ascribes the attempts to "eliminate the disturbing existence of the Pretender," to the involved political situation in Europe at the time, a situation in which Prussia, Austria and France were involved and in which Chancellor Metternich of Austria, Chancellor Hardenburg of Prussia and Talleyrand of France played the leading roles. "The motive which set Louis XVIII on the throne and robbed the man who was perhaps Louis XVII of his heritage are still difficult to detect," he says. "The reading of the history of the Nineteenth century will no doubt have to be modified more than once before adequate light is shed on the figure of Louis XVII."

But the motives of others concerned with Naundorff's history are fairly obvious. Louis Philippe (Louis XVIII) and his government refused to examine Naundorff's claim in the civil court and expelled him without trial to England. In spite of Naundorff's repeated entreaties, Marie Therese, the Dauphin's sister who survived her imprisonment in the Temple, persistently refused to grant him an interview and never ceased to describe him as an imposter. It is reasonable to suppose that both of them feared that Naundorff's claims might be proved genuine and he would thus be the only legitimate heir to Louis XVI's throne and his wealth.

"If Naundorff was identical with Louis XVII, his life is so remarkable that his adventures deserve a place in history," says Madol. "If, on the other hand, he was an imposter, he has an even greater title to recognition. For he must have been a genius to emerge at the age of fifty from an insignificant existence in Prussia and go off to an unknown land, there to play the part of a claimant to the throne. After a few months he was able to express himself so perfectly in a foreign language that he was able to convince the most important persons. In his long years of correspondence with his wife and children he never once quits the role of heir to the throne. In addition to the circumstance that both he and his eight children all bear a striking resemblance to the Bourbons, his handwriting follows the characteristics of the Bourbons. He was able to show a number of personal marks, such as a mole in the shape of a pigeon, which had been conspicuous in the Dauphin. Even his opponents were so much struck by the dignity of his demeanor that no one found him ridiculous in the part. The man who was able to sustain his assumed role so well must have been a genius.

"This man attained his object to the point that his children were registered in England as princes of France, that his grandchildren are today entitled by law to live under the name of Bourbon, and that in 1913 Henri Rochefort was sentenced for libel for refusing to admit that the family had the right to call themselves Bourbon. Their grandfather is none the less still branded as an imposter. The supposition that he was obsessed by a mania is easy to rebut. In spite of many singularities Naundorff never in his life showed signs of being mentally defective."

Naundorff died in 1845 in Delft, Holland, and an examination of his body which was made in the presence of Dutch officials (whose report, incidentally, referred to him as "Louis XVII") showed that it bore the same marks as were known to have been borne by the Dauphin. These were the scar on the lip, the broad mole on the thigh, the prominent teeth (similar to Louis XVI's "rabbit teeth") and the triangular vaccination mark, exactly as Madame de Rambaud, his nurse, had described and recognized them. To this day, despite protests which have been made by the French government, his gravestone in the churchyard at Delft bears the inscription which reflects the recognition of his claims according by the Dutch government. It reads: "Here lies Louis XVII, Charles Louis, Duc de Normandie, King of France and Navarre; Born at Versailles on March 27, 1785; Died at Delft on August 10, 1845."

Naundorff's appearance on the stage of history took place a century ago, but his name has been heard again in recent years. When Jules Favre, who had been Naundorff's legal adviser and worked for years to establish his claims, went as French minister of foreign affairs to sign the terms of the armistice imposed upon France by Bismarck, to end the Franco-Prussian war in 1871 he had with him no official seal to put on the agreements after he had signed them. Bismarck suggested that he use the ring he was wearing, so Favre took off the ring and pressed it into the wax beside his signature. The ring, an antique gem in a simple gold setting, bore upon its surface the lilies of France, the symbol of the Bourbons. It had been given to Favre in 1852 by his grateful client, Karl Wilhelm Naundorff. In telling his aide-de-camp about the incident, as they were returning from the meeting with the Germans, Favre stated it as his firm belief that Naundorff was Louis XVII and remarked upon the fact that this important document which he had just signed bore the emblem of the son of Louis XVI.

This ring had an interesting later history. At the end of the World War Premier Clemenceau sealed the treaty of Versailles with the same ring which had sealed France's defeat in 1871! So the man who may have been "The Lost Dauphin" and the "Shadow King of France" again played a part in world history.

TSK-TSK!

A Georgia statesman tells the story of an aged negro who saw an extraordinary-looking instrument in the shop of an optician. He gazed in open-mouthed wonder, and, turning to the optician, inquired:

"What is it, boss?"
 "That," replied the optician, "is an ophthalmometer."
 "Sho," muttered the other, his eyes still fastened on the thing as he backed out, "sho' dat's what I was afeared it was!"

Acidity

The common cause of digestive difficulties is excess acid. Soda cannot alter this condition, and it burns the stomach. Something that will neutralize the acidity is the sensible thing to take. That is why physicians tell the public to use Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this delightful preparation can neutralize many times its volume in acid. It acts instantly; relief is quick, and very apparent. All gas is expelled; all sourness is soon gone; the whole system is sweetened. Do try this perfect anti-acid, and remember it is just as good for children, too, and pleasant for them to take.

Any drug store has the genuine, prescriptive product.

Elfin Oak for Kiddies

The children who play in Kensington gardens, London, are to be surprised with a fairy oak figure. An ancient oak was hauled into the park and an artist, Ivor Innes, converted the root into a great gnome. Innes secured the idea when in the country, where he noticed a root which with a few daubs of paint became a perfect little Imp.

Glass Pictures Produced

Stained glass of different colors may be fused into one picture by a process just invented by Basil R. Bayne, an artist of Gerrard's Cross, England. The invention is regarded in England as the greatest development in the technique of stained glass since the earliest days of the art. It is claimed that the use of leadwork and enamels is eliminated, and that the new glass can be produced more cheaply than other forms of pictures in glass.

RED CROSS NOTES

Sometime ago a magazine article appeared entitled "The Highest Paid Executive in the World". It referred to Judge John Barton Payne and his work as chairman of the Central Committee of the American National Red Cross. It was seized up on immediately by many of those people who believe that everyone engaged in humanitarian work diverts funds contributed for charitable purposes to their own interests. Immediately Vox Populi, Pro Bono Publico, Constant Reader and Whither Are We Wending, took their pens in hand and dashed off protesting letters to their favorite newspapers. Judge Payne, having a clear conscience and a sense of humor, did not make reply to any of them. Plenty of people, however, came to his defense. After the clouds had lifted it was quite evident that Vox Populi and his associates had fretted unnecessarily. Their conclusions had been reached from head-line reading. This article pointed out that Judge Payne received no salary for his Red Cross work and even paid the expenses of his office. The high salary referred to in the title came from his realization of the good works of the organization which he headed and from the gratitude of the people helped. Workers in the Chicago Chapter, American Red Cross receive similar "high" salaries. Although they have no purchasing power they do provide much compensation. We are glad to share a few of the emoluments we have received in our War Service Department for your interest and support have made them possible.

Green Garden will move into the George Haass house vacated by Mr. Scofield.

Lions Club Assured for Midlothian

With 31 paid up members, a complete list of officers (including the Lion Tamer and Tail Twister) and boundless enthusiasm the Midlothian Boosters Club voted Monday night to apply for a charter from the Lions International.

Starting the meeting with only 23 paid-up members, eight more stepped up and laid their five dollars on the dotted line. With the necessary funds in hand, the first step toward becoming a Lions club was started.

President Claire Moore appointed the following committees: Entertainment—E. H. Searle, Henry Stolz and Frank Stuart Jr. Charter night—Al Clifton, Ben Schroeder, James Hickley, Wm Sedgwick and Arthur Woerheide. School Dedication—R. K. Cumming, Charles Weinberger, Frank Stuart Jr., Henry Fredholm, Ralph Woerheide and W. St. Germain.

Building and Zoning—Ralph Woerheide, H. Van Martin, N. Nagel and Chaplin. Drainage—Howard Hulet, Ralph Woerheide and H. Fredholm. Constitution and By-Laws—Roy G. Andrews (balance of committee to be announced later).

Officers are as follows—Claire Moore, president; Rudolph Grill, secretary; Clarence Mills, treasurer; First vice pres., R. K. Cumming; Second vice pres., Walter Dole; third vice pres., Al Clifton.

N. Nagel was voted Lion Tamer and Walter Erickson Tail Twister. E. H. Searle, George Baenlin, T. E. Moore and Henry Stolz were elected treasurer. All officers were elected by acclamation.

To assure a successful entertainment at the next meeting, the hat was passed. After Claire Moore had shaken loose the change from the hat band, $6.75 was counted.

Business men will be given one more week to join; then others than local business men will be taken in to bring the membership up to fifty.

When "Eddie" Searle arrived on the scene about 11 o'clock, he was immediately drafted as sing leader. And the new song books were given such a workout that Chief Terry came in to investigate—whereupon a song was dedicated to him. Having squared themselves with the police department, the members sang "The End of a Perfect Day" and made a noisy departure.

Luncheon Guests

E. D. Chaplain and E. H. Searle were guests of "Lion Joe" Adams, director of the Lions International, at the weekly luncheon of Chicago Central Lion club last Tuesday.

Chaplain and Searle reported a splendid time and a very good lunch. They were cordially received and made to feel perfectly at home. The type of men, all executives of large corporations, belonging to the club made a deep impression on them, as did the spirit of good fellowship. Mr. Chaplain extended the thanks of the Midlothian boys for the invitation and Mr. Searle gave a brief outline of the progress being made here. Lion C. Earl Sutton, president of the club, extended the best wishes of the Central club to the Midlothian group.

Mrs. Rena Elrod, state representative, spoke on "Should Women Serve on Juries" and Betty Holmes, "Dream Daddy Girl" of WGN gave several selections. Searle and Chaplain will make a full report at the next meeting of the local group on Oct. 6.

Largest Crowd of Year See Aces Smother the Eagles by 8 to 4 Score

Before three hundred and fifty howling fans the Eagles threw away the village championship last Sunday when the Aces managed by Feroocious Frank Foster and captained by Silent George Fikrle took them for an 8 to 4 ride.

It was a whopping throw that killed the Eagles chances. With three men on in the third for the Aces George Fikrle poled the ball into the waiting and receptive glove of Lefty Bellows in deep center. Which was fine for the moment from the Eagles standpoint. But Lefty's heave home was quite the contrary. It went sailing high and handsome through the blue and as it crossed the plate was still 25 feet over Jimmy Barnes' head.

And while he was looking for the ball in the vegetation somewhere near Markham three Aces came rolling home to put the score at 5 to 1. Despite heroic efforts the Eagles never overcame the lead.

Both teams went through the first inning one, two, three. In the second the Eagles were handed a run by Ramsey, pitching for the Aces, when with two out he passed three men in a row. But that was about all they ever got off him.

In their half the Aces went into a 2 to 1 lead when Fikrle doubled and the Unger brothers singled.

And then the disastrous third. Three Eagles came and went their way after a brief display of talent to be followed by Ramsey who also went his way. But Aleck Stevenson walked unhindered to first, Ray McPherson singled, Clair Moore singled. The stage was set for George Fikrle, who was fast becoming a noisance to the Eagles and while he strolled back to the bench after his act his three teammates romped past him on their way home Jenkins ended the Eagles agony by rolling to Stuart.

Stuart opened the fourth for the Eagles with a single, Behrens flied to McPherson and Bellows added to his crimes by hitting into a double play. On the other side Unger doubled and Stevenson singled but they died waiting for relief.

In the fifth the Eagles began to smile and the future looked less dear and dismal. For Crowley singled over third. And Gromwall went to first on an error by Buchbinder; while Crowley went to second on his nose where he lay, sniffing the bag while life slowly returned to his injured frame. Then Jimmy Stevenson bunted and while Ramsey juggled the ball and thought things over Crowley Gromwall and Stevenson perched themselves on first, second and third. At this juncture Tschellin advanced to the plate; swung at a ball, watched two go by, swung at a second, swung at a third. But Jimmy Barnes had better luck or more skill and singled off Buchbinder's shin. Crowley came home. So too did Gromwall, but to no effect for the ball was there ahead of him. Stevenson and Barnes scored on Brossard's single. Frightened Frank Foster was saved the bother of pitching himself when Eddie Unger retired Stuart, score 5 to 4.

In the Aces half with Moore out, Fikrle did his best to stay in front of a nice, easy pitch and walked to first on a pitched ball as a reward. E Unger walked and Fikrle scored on an overthrow when Barnes mistook Hamlin Avenue for first base. Unger went to second on another overthrow by Barnes and traveled home on his brother's single. And that was all of importance in that inning. Score now 7 and 4.

In the sixth the Eagles again filled the bases but Tschellin, coaxed on by Ramsey's deceptive hurling, swung once too often and opportunity left to knock no more this season at the Eagles door.

Steele replaced Gromwall in the box for the Eagles in the last half of the sixth and after striking out Ramsey was nicked for three singles by A. Stevenson, who scored, McPherson and Moore. But he gladdened the hearts of all good men when he pushed three fast balls across the plate before Taciturn George Fikrle could get the bat off his shoulder.

The seventh was dead. Barnes singled for the Eagles but was tagged while napping off first. Jenkins doubled in the second half and Buchbinder went to first on J. Stevenson's error but A. Stevenson, L. Unger and Ramsey heard the Umpire call strike three.

In the eighth three men (and no more) batted on each side.

The last spasm brought no relief to the Eagles. Singles by Jimmy Stevenson and Tschellin who had finally got his eye on the ball were lost when Barnes and Brossard retired.

It was the best attended game played in Midlothian this year and if noise is an index, the most enthusiastic. The crowd got its money's worth. Both teams were on their toes throughout; an edge in pitching and considerably tighter fielding won the game for the Aces.

Frank Foster for himself and the members of the Aces' team wishes to thank at this time the people of Midlothian for their generous support during this and other seasons.

Posen Boy Killed In Fist Fight Over Baseball

Joseph Czarnik, 15, of 14447 Blaine ave., Posen, was killed in a fist fight with Mike Krzowski, also 15, of 14444 Palmer ave., on Tuesday afternoon. The fight is said to be the result of an argument at the home plate during a ball game between the youngsters.

Both boys had exchanged several blows when the Czarnik boy fell as though fainting and failed to get up. The other boy tried to help him and asked others to get water. When the deceased boy's father came, he rushed him to the hospital, but the lad died on the way.

Mike Krzowski was locked up in the Blue Island jail pending the inquest.

At the inquest at Kerr's Undertaking parlor, Harvey on Tuesday, a coroner's jury found that the boy came to his death by accident. Death resulted from a broken neck. The Krzowski boy was released.

Bremen Township Health Topics

Eleanor Gallagher, R. N.

We have started our routine physical examinations in the schools and find that greater interest than ever before is being shown in this program. So much so in fact that I have been threatened by one teacher with blackmail if I do not confer special favors on her school. I fear that some of the teachers as well as some of the parents have lost sight of the real purpose of this exam. It is simply to call the attention of the parents to the fact that their child is in need of attention of a doctor, dentist or oculist. Whenever a given town or school reaches the point in population and finances where they can afford to put on their own nurse, this releases the County Nurses' time for smaller towns and more rural sections; and this is what the rural nursing service was established for. Cook County is now furnishing more nursing service to the people than any County in the State of Illinois.

DEPARTMENT CALLED OUT

The Midlothian Fire Department was called out at 5:50. Tuesday morning by a fire in the basement of the Fleming home on St. Louis Avenue. About $200 damage, was caused by the blaze, which is thought to have originated in the wiring.

MUST REGISTER TO VOTE

Unless you register in person on Sept. 27 or Oct. 7, you will not be allowed to vote this November or for two years after. No affidavits will be accepted this year.

CORRECTION

"Stunt Day" for the Blue Birds will be held at the home of Mrs. Robert Tanner, Hamlin ave. on the first Thursday in November instead of with Mrs. Lancaster as was announced in last week's issue of the MESSENGER.

In the last issue of the Messenger it was stated that the action of the village board regarding the fire department was taken at a "special meeting". This is not correct, as it was an adjourned meeting.

Letters to the Editor

Midlothian, Ill. Sept. 15, 1930
To the Editor:

I, Vincent DePaul McCourt, have tendered my resignation as a member of the Midlothian Volunteer Fire Department. My reasons for so doing are as follows: Before the incorporation of our village, a group of men organized a volunteer fire department, giving freely of their time and effort to serve the community in time of need. They continued this service after the village was incorporated and are still faithfully serving the public, having done so under different political administrations.

Recently, if statements made at a Village Board meeting be true and I believe them to be, as no contradiction was offered, members of the Village Board solicited suggestions from one of our men for the improvement of the department. He wrote what he thought was a good idea. His suggestion was acted upon by the Village Board and our Department was reduced seven men. In other words instead of 25 men we had only 18 men, or 28 per cent less protection to give the village. When this action was protested at the board meeting of Tuesday, September 9th, the Board offered the defense that the firemen requested this change and adjourned their meeting to Friday evening to get a definite statement from the firemen as to their wishes, indicating that the Board would co-operate with the fire department. On Thursday, Sept. 11th the firemen, at a regular meeting voted unanimously to notify the Board in writing that they had not asked to re-organize and knew nothing about a suggestion offered to the Board, as it came from one man and not from the department. This same evening, a petition to the board was circulating, condemning the original suggestion which caused a reduction in the department. This petition was not submitted for approval at the meeting, but was signed by nearly all present.

The following night (Friday) a second petition appeared (outside of a regular meeting.) This second sanctioned the action of the Board in reducing the department and the signers were told that petition No. 1 protested the action of the Board. This was not true, as the first was simply a denunciation of an anonymous communication, which tended to disrupt our department. The second petition was submitted, despite my objections that it was in conflict with the wishes of our membership, as shown at the previous night's meeting. As a result the Board was confused as to the intent of the department as a whole. (I sincerely believe that the purpose of that second petition was to confuse things.) The question of reducing the membership was then referred back to the department. Not to consider but to act on by secret ballot.

In other words, some members of the Village Board (by soliciting suggestions from one of our members) stirred up a fire and when the heat became too great to handle, they call on our department to handle it for them. Yes to handle, not as we see fit to do, but as they want us to do. We must by secret ballot, reduce our membership 28 per cent to (continued on back page)

Membership of Dept. Left to Volunteers

On motion of E. A. Burns, seconded by Wm. Kreis, the Midlothian village board on Friday night gave the fire department a chance to settle the question of membership. The department was instructed to hold a secret ballot, giving the seven members omitted from the new list a chance to vote. Meanwhile Chief Sagadin and the 18 members remain.

Two communications were brought in by the department—one disclaiming any knowledge of a "petition" to the board from the firemen, the other communication stated that the other members signing it have no protest against the action of the board.

Trustee Jebens asked for an explanation from the firemen, as he considered there was a conflict in the two communications. So each fireman was asked to state whether he was satisfied with the department before the change was made and if he were satisfied now. The twelve signers were practically unanimous in declaring that they were not satisfied before and were now. So the board referred the question of membership back to the department.

Floyd McEwen expressed his opinion of some of the firemen in which opinion he was backed by others whose names were left from the new roll. Nick Healy protested the change and asked for a list based on seniority rights.

In answer to the suggestion that these men be given a chance to resign, W. R. Schaller commented that "a rose by any other name would be as sweet". President R. J. White asked the firemen to present their by-laws for the approval of the board.

Fireman R. K. Cumming gave an explanation of the whole affair. The so-called "petition" was written by him; he stated that his suggestion was asked by members of the board; hence they knew that it was not a "petition" from the department. However, he stated, he thought the change proposed was for the benefit of the department and that their acceptance of the change proved it. He understood that the village desired to cut the force.

Prominent Speakers Address Republicans

Several prominent candidates spoke at a well attended meeting of the Republican club at Woerheide hall on Monday evening. Good delegations were present from Tinley Park and Oak Forest; even Posen was well represented.

Senator Huebsch made a good defense of the new registration Law, which he introduced. He stated that Cook County no longer consisted of farm communities, where everyone knew everyone else, so the law was necessary.

Frank Kriz, candidate for county commissioner, told what the county board has done for the country towns in the way of good paved roads. Commissioner John Jaranski brought the regrets of candidates Busse and Miller.

Wm. F. Propper, Louis Nettelhorst and Frank Foster also spoke. Otto J. Reich, candidate for president of the county board, said that he had been raised in a country town so would be well able to represent the outlying districts.

Smith.

If we do as ordered, we are surrendering our rights to the constitution and by-laws of our department which provides for dismissal from service for various offenses.
Although no offenses have been committed, some seven men must suffer the loss of an ideal, namely, the privilege of being a volunteer to serve some unfortunate family from loss by fire.
Indications are that the wishes of the Board will be complied with and enemies will be made for no good reason.
That is why, I have tendered my resignation and request that it be accepted by a unanimous vote of all present. I also wish to state that I have enjoyed my association with you all and hope all will understand my attitude of not wanting to surrender my birthright for a pot of porridge.

Respectfully,

THE PIKE'S PEAK TEST PROVES

IF YOU'RE BOTHERED BY CARBON, CONOCO IS THE OIL FOR YOU!

Dear to the heart of every motorist is the way his car performs under heavy "pulls" and nothing contributes more to a sweet running motor than absence of carbon troubles. Now, at last, there is a motor oil which is truly outstanding in its extremely low carbon-forming tendencies. As indicated by the chemists' reports following the recent Pike's Peak Tests, CONOCO Germ-Processed Motor Oil is that oil.

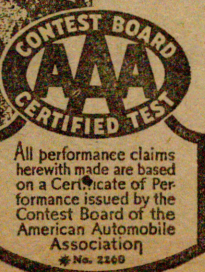

For after each trial run on each of the oils, motors were torn down, the condition of the motors inspected, and the carbon carefully scraped off and saved. Observations were made as to the hardness and tenacity with which the various carbon formations clung to the metal.

CONOCO'S superiority in this regard was proven, in that the carbon formed by Germ-

Processed oil was noticeably less by volume and by weight. You may say, "What do these tests mean to me? I never drive in the mountains."

Here is the answer. In the Pike's Peak tests, every conceivable operating condition was intensified. Because of constant climb, frequent gear-shifting, motor racing, rapid temperature changes, radical barometric fluctuations, and high-speed dashes on the valley roads, nearly every motoring experience was met.

The results of these Pike's Peak Tests, arrived at by the compilation of more than ten-thousand observations, surely appeal to your judgment of motor oil merit. Surely these become good and sufficient reasons why you should become a new user of CONOCO Germ-Processed Motor Oil.. at the Sign of the CONOCO Red Triangle.

THE STORY

Renewing a childhood attachment, Ernestine Briceland, of a wealthy family, is attracted by Will Todd, newspaper artist, son of a carpenter. They lunch together and recall their school days.

CHAPTER I—Continued

Lillian was ash blond, and very lovely. Her eyes were a kind of deep violet, serene calm eyes, and her lips were thin and bright red, beautifully cut. Her nose was patrician, her skin a clear milky white, and she wore just enough rouge to give her a faint rose color and make her eyes more lovely. The two girls plunged at once into the conversation of sisters, without beginning or end.

"I've been to the matinee with Sadie and Juel. Sadie's seen Delancey's show ten times. She's as crazy as she can be. Imagine falling in love with an actor. She's written him letters and letters. But he won't see her."

"She is kind of old for that line," said Ernestine, perched on the edge of her bed, a silk stocking in her hands. "I saw Will Todd today."

"Will Todd? Who is he?"

Ernestine reminded her, and Lillian admitted that she remembered.

"He's charming," Ernestine said. "I thought I'd ask mamma to invite him here for tea some afternoon, or for dinner, some night when he doesn't work."

Lillian stared, then laughed. "If you want to see him again, if you want an affair with him, don't tell mamma," she advised Ernestine, "or that will be the end of it. A little lame boy about the house one summer is quite a different matter from an attractive grown man. Mamma will make him miserable."

Ernestine considered this. "I don't see why," she said stubbornly.

"Certainly you see, darling," said Lillian. "We are not to have any irregular affairs now. We are to marry."

"Well," said Ernestine, "what of it? You can't marry unless you're asked. I can be friends with Will without marrying him, can't I?"

"I doubt it," said Lillian calmly. "You always go to such extremes, Ernestine. You are always blundering around, taking such awful chances and making wild friends. You've been spoiled and have had your way about lots of things. But this is one thing you can't have."

Ernestine pook-pooked Lillian, but felt at the same time that she would say nothing about Will just now.

"Beth's going to be married. She's going to marry Johnnie Allison."

"I'm not surprised, are you?" asked Ernestine, thinking of Will's gestures—the way he moved his hands continually.

"No, I'm not surprised. It's just what she wanted. One ought to know what one wants. I do. We talked about it today."

"I can tell you what you want without talking to you about it," said Ernestine with sisterly decision. "You want a house in Hubbard Woods, or else, one of those big co-operatively owned apartments on the drive, near downtown. And you want a limousine, and a rich handsome husband. You've got it all planned out."

"In detail," agreed Lillian, unperturbed. "Pretty much as you named it. I want Loring, for myself."

"Why don't you ask him?" exploded Ernestine, her feelings a confusion of resentment that Lillian had showed her the fallacy of her own dream, of hurt for her sister, that Loring should have been such a fool, of scorn for these plotters.

"I probably won't need to," Lillian answered, and went on, before Ernestine could interrupt her again: "If not Loring, then somebody much like him. I merely mentioned him as an example. After I've been married a few years, I want a son, and if I get along nicely, I wouldn't mind a daughter. I want everything right. A man who is already a member of good clubs, so that the money he makes will take us in the right direction, and we won't have to stand and wait. All right, go on and hoot. I know what I want, anyhow, and that's more than you know." She looked at Ernestine with some severity, and added darkly: "What's more, I'll get it. Watch me."

Ernestine could see Lillian as she had planned it all out. A correct house, a correct husband, perhaps even a correct baby or two. The same old business over and over, with correct people coming and going and Loring stalking handsomely about.

Not for her. She knew what she wanted. She wanted love! She wanted something not mentioned on Lillian's list. She wanted passionate, romantic love. She wanted adventure, an inevitable great adventure.

Suddenly she stood trembling, her heart beating with great strong strokes. She was terrified with the intensity of her feeling, with the vivid, almost material picture of Will Todd's violent personality before her. One person, one in all the world, and not anybody else. She wanted love, and all her wakening instincts warned her that she had found it.

CHAPTER II

The Lady Promises

Again and again Ernestine resolved to tell mamma all about Will, but again and again her confidences faltered before mamma's bright energy, before mamma's staccato bossiness. It was really her first secret from her family, and she did not feel right about it. Of course she was old enough to have a friend if she wanted one, a friend of her own choosing, but Lillian's attitude that she was having an "affair," a romance on the side, purely for the thrill of it, dismayed her. Yet she couldn't tell mamma, and an incident occurred which sealed her silence.

She had called Will on the telephone the next morning after her encounter with him on the street, and that had been the beginning of an absorbing intimacy. He worked in the afternoon and at night six days a week. He had nothing better to do with his forenoons and his luncheon hour than share them with Ernestine. But the very time of these engagements made

"But You Know Just How Papa Would React to Will Todd."

Ernestine safe from curiosity. It was a time of day exclusively the property of women in mamma's world. It would never have occurred to mamma that a love affair could have proceeded during a succession of forenoons.

And a love affair was what it rapidly became. Ernestine could not prolong the time with Will enough to suit her, and his eagerness soon matched, then outrode, her own. His enthusiasm, his energy were compelling, and Ernestine felt the rousing and stirring of her own personality in touch with his. Within a week she was desperately in love. She had no room for any thought and feeling but those which concerned Will Todd. Presently she realized that the termination of their friendship would be a true catastrophe, and with this realization she began to practice secrecy with skill and determination.

One blowy, gusty Sunday morning in December she had escaped church and met him and talked, hand in hand, as they always talked, quickly, starvedly.

Eventually a little silence fell between them, and in its magic, without speaking a word, they turned and kissed each other, and smiled a little dimly and leaned together. The touch of lips, and then the pressure of cheek to cheek was magic. His arms slipped about her, and for a long, long time they sat in a swing of joy.

There was no word spoken, no promise, but Ernestine knew now that she must tell mamma. The family was home from church when she reached the house, sitting in the big living room, all of them engrossed in gossip. Mamma looked at Ernestine sharply.

"Why didn't you come to church?"

"I went for a walk," evaded Ernestine, and her face flamed with color, for they all looked at her, and she felt that Will's love-making was visible upon her. Mamma said no more, however, and Lillian turned to her with the news.

Motorist Learned That Small Boy Was Correct

Humor can be found even in parking difficulties. A Brooklyn motorist had circled two blocks in an effort to find a place to park the other night. He was taking his family to a neighborhood motion picture show and already was ten minutes late for the feature picture. Finally he sighted an ideal space near the theater. Speeding up ahead of other motorists he stopped and started to back into the space.

"You can't park here, mistah," volunteered a fat negro boy from the curb.

Ignoring the negro boy, the motorist completed backing his car into the space, then looked out and angrily demanded:

"What's the matter with you? What do you mean, I can't park here?"

"Nothin', mistah, nothin' at all," replied the lad with a frightened look

"You remember I told you Sadie Hall was in love with the actor, Lon Delancey?" Ernestine nodded, and Lillian said with some satisfaction, "Well, she finally succeeded in meeting him, and they were married last night. Every one was talking about it in church this morning."

"Well, what of it?" said Ernestine. "She can marry him, can't she?"

"Ernestine!" said her father sternly. "You know it isn't suitable." He was a big man, a little too stout, with a handsome florid face. His brown eyes were warm and kind, but his big nose was acquisitive, his mouth stern and hard, a man of brilliant mind, but limited by prejudices.

"It is her money he wants," said papa, "and nothing else. The girl's a fool, and was not brought up properly, or she would never have done such a thing."

Loring put in his oar. He was always there on Sundays, thought Ernestine, who was tired of having him around.

"Any man who urges a girl to keep her love affair a secret from her folks is a blackguard, and a girl may as well realize it first as last. No real man would do such a thing. He would be honorable." He looked at her when he said it, with such meaning that Ernestine felt a faint dismay.

"But how ridiculous," she exclaimed. "You all know, every one of you, that if she had told her folks of her infatuation, they would have carried her off to Europe, or had him forced out of town. They would have separated them instantly."

"But that's why she ought to tell her people," said papa. "No girl can trust her own judgment, when she gets out of her own class. Her people know best, and she should confide in them."

All this while mamma had been watching Ernestine. Mamma was so pretty, with her violet eyes, and smooth fair hair, and her slender vigorous body. But mamma was sharp.

"Neither of my girls would do such a thing," she said now in her soft quick voice, but with a meaning that Ernestine and Lillian both sensed. "I am sure that neither of my little girls would do such a thing to me—have a secret love affair. Would either of you?"

"Don't be nutty, mamma," advised Lillian, and Ernestine was silent.

Later, alone, Lillian turned to Ernestine eagerly.

"You'd better come across. I think the folks are on to you."

"You haven't told them?"

"Of course not," said Lillian impatiently. "It's your own business. But, Ernestine, you aren't really going to fall in love with him, are you? Papa would be furious."

Ernestine shook the bright tears from her eyes and smiled at Lillian. After a moment, Lillian went on uncertainly.

"Loring saw you yesterday morning. He asked me who the young man was, and I told him, but asked him not to mention it. Still he may tell. He's awfully fond of you, Ernestine. He's always telling me that you are just like a little sister to him. He might feel it his duty to tell papa about you and Will."

"But there's nothing about Will that anybody could object to," protested Ernestine. "I'm not engaged to him, but if I should become engaged, I don't see who could care. He's fine and good and gentle. He's brave, too, a real man."

Lillian shook her head.

"It's your funeral," she said, with the heartless laissez-faire of her generation, which feared, above all things, that it might become its brother's keeper. "But you know just how papa would react to Will Todd. He's the son of papa's old carpenter. He's poor, and he hasn't been to school, and he's not very strong—there's nothing but objections to such an idea, Ernestine. Anyhow, I can't see why you could let yourself even think of such a thing as getting engaged. Imagine taking a chance like that!"

Will said nothing about marriage. He was full of talk, overflowing with his own vitality, enraptured with Ernestine's beauty and dearness. One day, however, when they had gone for their usual walk north along the lake shore, he seemed oddly silent and thoughtful, and at times he looked at her, as though wondering whether to speak his mind or not. When he left her, he kissed her again and again, and said oddly, "Remember me," as though it were farewell.

"I'll see you tomorrow," she whispered to him, and turned her fur collar up against the wind.

Debt That World Owes to English Naturalist

The first man to dream of treating the sea as a gigantic food farm was the famous English naturalist Frank Buckland, who was born in 1826 and died in 1880. During the last 20 years of his life he never tired of impressing upon his countrymen the importance of the fisheries and the need for wider knowledge of the habits of fish. He was the first to look ahead and conceive the idea of fish culture.

Though it is usually caught in rivers, the salmon is really a sea fish. It ascends the rivers to spawn, and the young salmon spends two years of its life in fresh water before going down to the sea.

Buckland found that nature's methods in the breeding of salmon were extraordinarily wasteful, not more than perhaps one egg in 10,000 ever producing a fish that grew to maturity. By introducing a scientific system he was able to bring about a wonderful increase in many of our great fisheries, and it is largely due to his early work that the salmon has been introduced successfully into such distant countries as New Zealand.—London Tit-Bits.

Glass-Bottomed Boat Fast

Fitted with a glass bottom for the study of the sea floor, a scientific ark will soon take to the shallow Pacific waters, along the Oregon shore. Running aground has no terrors for this strange craft, for it can crawl along the bottom propelled by four caterpillar treads like those of a tractor, says Popular Science Monthly. Its speed is 50 feet a minute. The boat is the invention of G. F. McGowan of Portland, Ore. It is 42 feet long, and is powered with a 75 horse power gasoline motor.

Happy Woman Tells How She Lost 19 Pounds of Fat in 27 Days

During October a woman in Montana wrote—"My first bottle of Kruschen Salts lasted almost 4 weeks and during that time I lost 19 pounds of fat—Kruschen is all you claim for it—I feel better than I have for years."

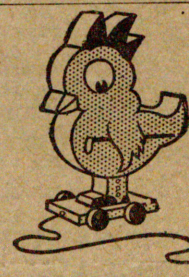

Here's the recipe that banishes fat and brings into blossom all the natural attractiveness that every woman possesses.

Every morning take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast.

Be sure and do this every morning for "it's the little daily dose that takes off the fat."—Don't miss a morning. The Kruschen habit means that

Restless CHILDREN

CHILDREN will fret, often for no apparent reason. But there's always Castoria Harmless as the recipe on the wrapper, mild and bland as its tastes. But its gentle action soothes a youngster more surely than a more powerful medicine.

That's the beauty of this special children's remedy! It may be given the tiniest infant—as often as there is need. In cases of colic, diarrhea or similar disturbance, it is invaluable. A coated tongue calls for just a few drops to ward off constipation; so does any suggestion of bad breath. Whenever children don't eat well, don't rest well, or have any little upset—this pure vegetable preparation is usually all that's needed.

At the same time the stomach, liver kidneys and bowels are toned up and the pure, fresh blood containing Nature's six life-giving salts are carried to every organ, gland, nerve and fibre of the body and this is followed by "that Kruschen feeling" of energetic health and activity that is reflected in bright eyes, clear skin, cheerful vivacity and charming figure.

Mistortune Comes In a Deluge

The old saying "It never rains, but it pours" holds true as far as misfortune is concerned in the life of J. H. Nordsell of Mokena. About two months ago his father died. A short time later his children came down with scarlet fever and his family were quarantined for six weeks. This was hardly over when he hit a boy while driving an auto in Chicago about two weeks ago. The boy was quite badly hurt and is still in the hospital. The case against Mr. Nordsell is being held up awaiting the outcome of the boy's injuries. Mr. Nordsell is protected by insurance in this instance.

To cap the climax Mr. Nordsell's mother died quite suddenly in Chicago last Saturday. The funeral was held Tuesday with burial in the old town of Elkart, Indiana.

The friends of Mr. Nordsell hope that the deluge of misfortune has now ended for him.

To Reorganize S. W. Chamber of Com.

to force the early completion of the highway gaps and the continuation of the same to make a direct connection with Joliet and eventually extend the route on thru the state to St. Louis.

Discussion as to ways and means was general but in view of the fact that representations from several towns were not present, due to a misunderstanding as to the date of the meeting, no definite steps as to re-organization were taken.

However, it was decided to call another meeting on Wednesday evening, Sept. 24th in order to have every town properly represented. The directors of the Orland Park school extended the Chamber of Commerce an invitation to hold the meeting in the high school auditorium. J. W. Mahaffay, mayor of Palos Park also invited the organization to meet at the Palos Park Club House. However, the Orland invitation was accepted and the meeting is therefore called for 8 p. m. Wednesday, Sept. 24th at the Orland High School Auditorium at which time officers will be elected and complete details of re-organization worked out.

Mayor Jennings of Orland Park, Mayor Mahaffay of Palos Park and Mayor Peter Russo of Chicago Ridge all spoke on the necessity of organized effort and co-operation between the towns and villages along the Southwest Highway and pledged their efforts to help in making the re-organization of the Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce an assured success.
